Oh, if they had, and then would speak, How blessed it would be! I would not any knowledge seek That was not meant for me; Only to hear again the words That I have heard before. The treasured utterance of one

Who speaks on earth no more.

These walls have seen the dearest face
That smiles have ever blest;
These walls have heard the sweetest voice That sound has e'er carest. They've heard it call me o'er and o'er By many a tender name: Oh, if they might repeat them now, With voice and tone the same!

I silent sit for many an hour,
And joy to be alone,
I do not care for passing friends, Since I must miss mine own. The seat she chose, the lounge she prest, Are silent friends to me. I could not have a dearer guest

Than her sweet memory. So many things within this room Her touch has rendered dear, They seem like precious charms to keep My darling always near. I press on them the loving kiss Her warm, sort lips have met; No joy is left to me like this, Though mingled with regret.

I listen for the welcome step That dear, familiar sound And every spot it ever touched To me is sacred ground. Ah. me! how long the weary hours

That prove my waiting vain! The voice is still; the "vanished hand" Will ne'er clasp mine again.

Oh, speak, ye walls! Repeat the love

She whispered long ago! Grant me that comfort, lest my heart Break with its weight of woe My empty arms—my barren life— My bitter, useless tears! Oh! help me to forget them all,

"What can bring these la-dies into this district, filled with rough old Methodist lady, very particular and very pious, once kept a boarding-house and uncouth butchers and fat-boilers?"
I naturally asked myself. I had not long in Boston. Staunch to her principles, she would take no one to board who did not to wonder, as I followed a bevy of beau-ties into the slaughter-house of Henry nold to the eternal punishment of a large portion of the race. I ventured to ask one lady why she drank of the blood, when she replied: "On the recommendation of my physician. I am suffering from a lung affection that he reports is likely to result in consumption, and he says this is the only certainty of recovery-that I must partake of it freely."

of whom I had heard traditions, but who, until then, I had supposed existed only in the imagination of the city Bo-

"And how long, madam, have you fol-lowed this singular treatment?" I asked. "For nearly four months. At first my stomach rebelled at the sight and taste of it, and I could only barely taste it; but I remembered that we ate blood in our beefsteaks and roasts, and I gradually became resigned to it, until now I can drink a quart."

"How often do you come here!" was the next question.

"Well, not at any regular time. I usually come every Friday, which is the principal day for cattle-killing. Others do not drink the blood of cattle, but prefer that of lambs." "And do you find that your health is

I weighed but nine-ty-six pounds. Now, as you will see, I have considerable color in my face. I feel quite strong, and I weigh one hundred and fourteen pounds—quite a gain, you will say, in four months. My physician expresses the hope that, if I persevere a month or two more, a complete cure will have been experienced. The difficulty about it is the annoyance of coming here where we are exposed to the gaze of these rough men and children of the tenement-houses around us, who crowd into the doors and look at us with as much astonishment as if we were circus iders in a street parade. It is not pleasant for ladies, but we must come here, as the blood must be drank fresh from the veins before coagulation takes

This matter of a blood cure has naturally excited my curiosity, and having made diligent inquiry among my medical acquaintances, I have discovered some well verified cases where animal blood has been used to sustain and restore life, which will not only interest your medical readers, but all persons interested in scientific subjects.

A LIVELY EXPERIMENT.-A Cincinnati gentleman has recently proved his devotion to science by allowing himself to be stung by twenty-one consecutive bees. He took his sting at the rate of one dose per day, and after the tenth sting he felt no pain whatever from the remaining eleven in which he subsequently indulged. We therefore learn from his self-sacrificing labors the touching lesson that to be stung by a bee once a day for ten consecutive days renders one proof against additional stinging.— Anybody can try it.

physician that a hypochondriacal patient used to visit him invariably the day after reading the report of a suicide in the daily papers, possessed by a morbid fear of imitating the act of which he read.—

Sir Charles Bell, surgeon of Middlesex

Hospital, was one day describing, to a barber who was shaving him, a patient's unsuccessful attempt to cut his own throat, and, on the barber's request, pointed out the anatomy of the neck, showing how easily the deed might be accomplished. Before shaving operations were completed, the barber had left his shop and cut his own throat according to Sir Charles Bell's exact instructions .-

Sometimes there is an epidemic of suicides, as at Versailles, in 1793, when out of a small population 1,300 persons de-stroyed themselves in one year; or as in the Hotel des Invalides in Paris, when six of the inmates hanged themselves on a certain crossbar within a month. Very often the disease is hereditary, and at a certain age the members of one family will all in turn evince the suicidal tendency, while even children of very tender years have been known to end their own short lives by their own act, from force of example. Curious, too, are the methods of self-destruction, but they are too painful to bear description. A French-

CELEBRATED

Hats, Boots, Shoes,

HAS acquired a very extended reputation, which its efficacy alone has sustained for more than FIF-TY YEARS, as a remedy for Scrofula, Ulcerated Sore Throat, long-standing Rheumatic Affections, Diseases of the Stin, White Swelling, Diseases of the Bones, Hip-joint Disease, and all cases of an ulcerous character.

It is also particularly useful in Chronic Nervous Diseases occurring in debilitated constitutions, Inward Weakness, and all cases where the Langs are affected or the health broken down by the injudicious use of Mercury, Arsenic, or Quinine. It is a most useful Spring and Fall Purifier of the Blood. The laboratory is under the direction of Dr. Franklin Stewart, who has devoted his attention and skill in its careful preparation during the past twenty-five years, and not a bottle put up but is worth many times its cost to the patient. It is perfectly safe for the most diseased and debilitated, and, IN ALL CASES WHERE THE BLOOD IS NOT PURE, IT SHOULD BE USED FREELY.
